

Meet Amir.

Amir is six-years-old.

He lives in the mountains of Nepal.
Nepal is a country in Asia.

"I live in a painted wooden house in Bhais Dhure with my mother, father, grandmother and small sister Puja. We have a small goat farm and also a black cardamon farm, so when I'm not at school I help my parents with the farming."

Amir's journey to school is long. He feels tired walking so far. He likes coming to school.

Amir's long walk is also dangerous. He walks through woods and streams. During times of storms and heavy rainfall, there are floods and land-slides.

United World Schools is building a new school near to Amir's home. Soon, he will not need to walk far to get to school.

Amir will be able to play, learn, and walk to school safely.

What do you wish for children like Amir, who risk their safety going to school?
